Initially, in the 11th century, the House was a defense tower from the medieval period, of circular plant, built with irregular stone ashlar. Next to it was a medieval village. The refurbishment was made with care and with respect for the traditional systems of construction.

Giving rise to four houses that at first view they are not easy to differentiate since they are completely integrated to its origins. Some architectural parts from the 11th century have been preserved, (the Tower of Defense), and of the medieval period such as the arches, portals and original stones (Gothic).

The rest has been rehabilitated to the needs of our times.
